

HOSHINOYA Tokyo Chosen for Condé Nast Traveler’s “Gold List 2020” (Otemachi, Tokyo, Japan)

The renowned international travel magazine Condé Nast Traveler (publisher: Condé Nast Publications) announced on December 12 that HOSHINOYA Tokyo, operated by Hoshino Resorts (headquartered in Karuizawa, Nagano; CEO Yoshiharu Hoshino), had been awarded a spot on its “Gold List 2020.” Condé Nast Traveler’s “Gold List” is regarded as the ranking authority in hotel accommodations.

Condé Nast Traveler’s “Gold List” brings the best accommodations in the world to the magazine’s high-income readership. HOSHINOYA Tokyo, a “tower ryokan” in the heart of Tokyo, opened in 2016 and features 84 guest rooms (2 underground floors, 17 above-ground floors). Centrally located, the ryokan is within walking distance to Tokyo Station and the Imperial Palace. Much of the interior is finished in traditional Japanese style with tatami mat floors, and as is customary, guests must remove their shoes before stepping inside. Once they do, they are greeted with more Japanese architectural elements incorporated into contemporary designs that showcase excellent craftsmanship. The shoji paper sliding doors, wood, bamboo, and plasterwork all come together to make HOSHINOYA Tokyo a unique place unlike any other. We will strive to continue offering our first-class hospitality, along with activities and seasonal events to make Japanese culture more accessible to our valued guests.

**Condé Nast Traveler* is one of the world’s leading travel magazines read by luxury travelers, bringing its readers the latest news on high-quality travel destinations, hotels, restaurants, shopping, and more. The print and digital magazine monthly circulates approximately total 19M readers worldwide.
