About the Tiantai Mountain District

The Tiantai Mountain district is one of the most popular tourist destinations in China, which is visited by about 20 million people every year and is China’s “National 5A-class tourist attractions” *. This area is one of the sacred mountains in China, where it is known as the birthplace of Tendai Buddhism and associated with Taoism. In addition, temples are scattered around the valleys of the peaks at an altitude of around 1,200 meters, and one of them, the Guoqing Temple, is the birthplace of Chinese Tendai Buddhism, where there has been Buddhism faith since a long time ago. Dengyo Daishi Saicho, the founder of Tendai Buddhism in Japan, entered Tiantai Mountain in the Heian period to study Tendai teachings at Guoqing Temple and later opened Tendai Buddhism in Japan at Enryaku Temple located in the Hiei Mountain. Since then, many Japanese monks have visited Tiantai Mountain and so, it is a place that has been in connection with Japan for a long time.

The abundant nature where you can feel the changing seasons is one of the features of this location and there are many scenic areas such as the Taizhou Shiliang Waterfall, Huading National Forest Park, and the Qiongtai Valley. Moreover, it is famous for the 1,000 different kinds of Chinese herbs that grow at high altitudes, such as high mountain Yunwu tea, and citrus fruits.

Hoshino Resorts was first established as a Japanese inn/ryokan by Kasuke Hoshino in 1914 in Karuizawa in Nagano Prefecture before it began the operation of other resorts in Japan. Today, it has evolved into a highly influential hotel management company and is run by 4th-generation family member Yoshiharu Hoshino. Providing a unique experience focused on the local charms of each destination and a high level of omotenashi, Japanese-style hospitality, the company has expanded rapidly out of Karuizawa since 2001 and now operates more than 40 facilities both in and outside Japan under five distinct brands: HOSHINOYA, KAI, RISONARE, OMO, and BEB.
